We pose some seemingly simple questions such as What is love? Who has the right to love? Who can we love? This introductory-level lecture course surveys how love has been experienced and expressed from the pre-modern period to the present throughout the world. Among the themes we will explore are questions of sexuality, dating, kinship, and gender in art, film, and modern technologies such as the Internet, scientific advances in medicine, and social media.